My Unforgettable Experience

I had my first unforgettable experience when I was eleven years old, I visited a chocolate factory in Malaysia. It was an enjoyable experience.

Last summer, I went to Malaysia with my family. On the third day, we went to a chocolate factory. At first, we went into a building. It was full of chocolate, coco-beans, and boards that show the history of chocolate. One of the boards was quite interesting. It said that people used to crush coco-beans to make coco-powder with stones and mix it with water to make a drink. Then a scientist in the late seventies dried the chocolate drink and made the world's first chocolate.

Then, a worker told us to walk into a room. I was shocked when I entered the room! There was a massive machine! The worker said the machine was used for making chocolate.

The machine crushed the coco-beans and then added water. After that it heated the mixture and poured it to a mold, then a worker packed them and put them in a box. At last, the box would be delivered to the market by a truck.

This was certainly an amazing experience. I learnt a lot as well, like the history of chocolate and the process of making chocolate.
